Kunsthalle Thy is presenting an exhibition by Anna Bak.

The title of the exhibition is Fatal Waves.

The opening is on August 17 from 1 PM to 4 PM.

Kunsthalle Thy is wheelchair accessible.

Anna Bak is interested in the sea.

Many fishermen work in the sea off the coast of Denmark.

Fishing used to be a very dangerous job.

The feeling of the overwhelming power of nature scared the fishermen.

Stories of a nature full of fascinating creatures helped them cope with this fear.

Some people invented myths about sea monsters, mermaids, and other sea creatures.

Others began to believe that God could help them and became religious.

In her exhibition, Anna Bak shows a dark water surface.

In this water surface lies a sculpture that looks like the remains of a sunken ship.

At the edge of the water lies a mermaid, with a starfish on her head, and her left hand looks like a crab claw.

Next to the water stands a lighthouse that looks like a giant octopus.

From the head of the octopus comes a light that moves through the room.

Hanging from the beams of the Kunsthalle is a sculpture of two swallows.

Swallows are a very popular tattoo among sailors.

Like sailors, swallows always return home after long journeys.

On September 6 and 7, there will be a concert where the Nordic folk singer
Julie Hjetland will sing with a seashell.
